Customer Reviews

I liked it, but I should add not usual mail order bride story, since hero technically brought heroine in with her two sisters to have them work for him. He was interested in her but needed to court her before she agreed to marry him. It is a very cute, short, emotional at times but sweet novella. Hero and heroine both shy. Heroine has performance anxiety and I liked how everyone tries help her be more confident. Hero owns the theater company and brings the three sisters in to be the opening act, but he also likes heroine and wants to get to know her. Since both are going through pressure of opening night and shy about expressing how they feel it leads to some misunderstandings. Story runs smoothly and it was a nice ending. Lots great support was given to these two shy love birds:) Clean read. Sweet novella.

Miranda Lewis is now married Gilbert and Mabel flirts with almost everyone if the men. Maggie is the shy one who is having a hard time playing the piano and her part in singing. She is quite taken with Noah Young and day dreaming about him and messing up her playing. During one of her performances she freezes up and runs off the stage leaving her sisters to do a duet. Noah goes after her but she wants to be alone after speaking to him. She does not know he has a man watching for her safety until she goes back to the home where her family is staying. I am sure you will enjoy this story between Noah Young and Maggie Lewis.

Great story, I was really engrossed from the very start of your book. Please continue to make your readers, enchanted with your stories of the mail order brides.

Wonderful tale of love and joy set in the Old West. Great characters with full details make this an exciting story. Recommend to all readers of this genre.

This is a great series about a singing group comprised of three sisters. These stories are about the girls talent and how they find their true loves.
