Synopsis

From Award-Winning Author, MaryLu Tyndall, comes an exciting Medieval Romance surrounding the Spear of Destiny! Another novel knocked out of the literary ballpark by author MaryLuTyndall! ~ Michelle Griep, author of THE CAPTIVE HEART and BRENTWOODâ™S WARDAlexia D'Clere didn't ask to be Protector of the Spear, but after her dying mother gave her the tiny metal object and made her promise to keep it safe, she had no choice. Orphaned at age eight, she began to take over the running of her parent's castle with the help of a trusted steward. Yet, when a plot to murder her was revealed, a friar whisked her away to live hidden in the forest. There, she learned to shoot expertly with bow and arrow and hone her skills to see into the spirit realm. Now, at eighteen, Alexia continues to keep the Spear protected, provide meat for the starving village, while secretly caring for her ill sister who still lives in the castle. With Alexia's powers of spiritual discernment and her skill as an archer, she is no match for those who come for the spear. That is until she meets Ronar LePeine, one of the King's elite guard. Ronar desires nothing more than to do his duty to God and King and pay penance for past sins. Yet a forest sprite with red, flaming hair blocks his every move, all the while enchanting him like no other. Something evil lurks at Castle Luxley, and both Ronar and Alexia are soon thrust into the middle of a spiritual battle which will not only test their very beliefs, but put them both in mortal danger. ## Customer Reviews

She Walks in Power is the first book in a new medieval romance series called "Protectors of the Spear" by MaryLu Tyndall. I have been eagerly awaiting this new release and I am so pleased that it is finally here! Fans of Tyndall may worry that this isn't a pirate book like most of her others, but I can assure you that it is still phenomenal. Also, there seems to be quite the trend recently with young adult red-headed heroines in the Christian fiction market. Authors including Jody Hedlund, Melanie Dickerson, and now MaryLu Tyndall have all recently released novels with this in common, but again, I can assure you that this book is still worth the read; it stands out among the rest and is in fact my favorite of the three. The novel centers around a girl of noble birth who is hiding out in the woods since an assassination plot on her life almost a decade before the book begins. She is a follower of Christ and has been gifted with a spirit of discernment, which may be disconcerting for some readers, but I believe in it and loved to see it interwoven into current fiction. Anyway, this girl, Alexa, was entrusted by her mother with the spearhead that pierced Christ's body to ensure he was dead on the cross. This has been passed down through the ages in the story, and is now protected by Alexa. Alexa is also a Robin Hood type figure, who hunts in the forest where she lives for food for nearby villagers. She also tries to keep crime low and morale high. Ronar is a local knight who happens to be traipsing through Alexa's forest one day. Naturally, she attacks him, and naturally, he fights back and tries to catch her before realizing that she is a woman. This catches both of them off guard: Ronar isn't used to being ambushed, and Alexa's not used to being caught.
