Customer Reviews

In the last two years that I have been blogging and doing book reviews, I have been introduced to some amazing books and authors. But one author has impacted me in a way that I never expected. Last year I had the privilege to study through One In A Million with my church's ladies Bible Study. It came at the perfect time, as I was experiencing some serious wilderness situations in my life. Through her study and God working in my life and heart i have come to realize the value in experiencing wilderness experiences. Some experiences I could control, others not so much. Now, Shirer has come out with a book entitled Life Interruptions: Navigating the Unexpected and it examines the life of Jonah and how even when he did not want to obey God and do His will, God wanted him and sent him interruptions to show that and bring him back. The book is very well written, as all her books are, and 212 pages, is a quick read but packs a punch! A lot of learning is to be had from this book and I will definitely be going through it again in the future. But will take my time and really dig deep through it. However, I wanted to share just a few nuggets I pulled from Life Interrupted:- When God speaks, when He intervenes, when He permits a circumstance to rise up around you, it is your opportunity to write a story that people may still be talking about many years from now. Like those holy heroes of old from Scripture, your story of divine intervention - the one that brought you to your knees in frustration - could be the very thing that lifts others' eyebrows in wonder and amazement at your strength and tenacity, the one that cause them to see the sparkle of substance, significance, and impact in your life.
